Not illustrated. 1817 Excerpt: ... suggests and our progress in virtue requires. They are called ejaculations, being like darts of fire directed to Heaven, lifting our hearts thither, and piercing to the Divine Goodness, when accompanied with two qualities for their wings: the one, a firm persuasion of the delight God takes in seeing us labouring in the practice of virtue, the other a vehement desire of excelling in all virtue, on the sole motive of pleasing him. CHAPTER XXXVI. That the practice of Virtue requires continual application. OF all things which contribute to the acquiring of Christian Virtues, the scope of our present design, an earnest desire of advancing continually is of the greatest moment, since the least stop throws us back. The moment we cease from forming acts of virtue, our inclinations, naturally prone to ease and pleasures of the senses, raise in us disordered appetites, which overthrow, or at least much weaken our virtuous habits. To say nothing of the loss of many graces through such neglect, which we might have merited by a steady application to our spiritual advancement. Such is the difference of a journey on earth, and that which tends to Heaven. In the former we may frequently stop, without going back, and rest is moreover necessary to enable us to hold out to the journey's end; but in the latter, which leads to perfection, the more we advance, the more our strength increases: the reason is, the inferior appetites which throw all possible obstacles in our way to Heaven, grow weaker and weaker as we advance; and on the contrary, our good inclinations, the seat of virtue, acquire new strength. Thus as we advance in piety, the difficulties which at first occurred, continually diminish, and a certain delight, with which God is pleased to sweeten the bitterness of thi...
